

A Father's Fight
Brief Synopsis

Lamar Jones has everything going for him! He has an amazingly successful business—in fact he has a number of businesses and they are all doing extremely well. He is married with two children he adores, lives in a swanky mansion in a posh neighborhood, proudly drives a Bentley Flying Spur—he and his family want for nothing. But after the children mature, the marriage starts to show some cracks. His wife Denise is resentful that she sacrificed her career to raise the children while Lamar was able to flourish in his profession. One thing leads to another and the Joneses are soon at war. They separate and vehemently disagree on custody rights for the kids. It seems that Denise pulls him into court every other week. They have a no-holds-barred battle in front of the kids and often about them. Both parents love their kids but fail to see the damage their constant fighting is having on them. A tragic end to the story makes Lamar take a long look at himself. He decides to hit the road with his Flying Spur. He doesn't know exactly where he is heading or exactly what he is searching for—all he knows is that he will know when he finds it.