

Brief Synopsis
Oktubre

In Oktubre, Homicide Detective Jack Luna is hunting down a serial murder who only strikes every October. The psychotic murderer leaves a calling card – a hand-drawn October calendar with the date of each murder circled in red. After some brilliant police work and a little luck, Jack is able to track down the killer and stop his murderous rampage. The legendary October Killer is Max Ramirez and he will be imprisoned for the rest of his natural life.

But the heinous murderer has no intention of spending the rest of his days behind bars. At the first opportunity, Ramirez escapes and is on the loose again and, not coincidentally, it is the month of October. When word reaches Jack that Ramirez has escaped he is immediately on alert. He is disturbed to see the tell-tale calendars left at the murder scenes. What is more disturbing is the morning he found one of the killer's custom calendars tacked to his apartment door.

In the end, Jack has a very personal stake in finding the killer before he strikes again. He figures out through a series of incidents that the killer is targeting his younger sister and has been seen heading for the exact place where she is staying.
