

Brief Synopsis
For the Soul of Rose

Dew Moore has been in love with Rose LaFayette all his life. From his childhood days in Baton Rouge when he first spotted the beautiful Cajun girl with honey skin and bright green eyes, he was a goner. But Dew wasn't the only boy who adored the lovely Rose; his friend, Roy loved her too. Throughout their youth, the two boys vied for her attention and love. Rose was as nice and kind as she was beautiful and never wanted to hurt either boy's feelings although her heart always leaned toward Dew.

Unknown to Dew, the spirit of a voodoo witch named Marie who is also Rose's great-great grandmother, is determined to possess Rose's soul. Marie was murdered and had been a restless soul ever since. She was born under the blood red-moon – a birthright that portends the special powers of black magic – and wants to take over the body and soul of Rose the only one of her descendents who was also born under the special powers of the blood-red moon. Dew never suspected that loving Rose would result in a battle with black magic and a fight to the death to save Rose from herself.
