

Brief Synopsis
We the People

We the People is the story of Fritz Ivan a dedicated and patriotic US Attorney General who has pursued corrupt elected officials and representatives for a decade but has repeatedly been thwarted by the Executive Branch and his own Justice Department. Fritz is a man of action and decides that he's done with trying to make things right the right way and that it's time to make things right the wrong way. He decides to follow the advice of George Washington who cautioned that no one should be reluctant to take up arms in defense of their country.

During his tenure as a US Attorney, Fritz prosecuted many criminals from around the world who violated US laws or were threats to national security. His Rolodex of bad characters is limitless. He decides that no one could right the US Constitution better than a band of mercenaries who could "convince" the corrupt representatives to follow the straight and narrow. And these officials do see the light when they see their peers drop off one by one by one.

Of course, no one knows that Fritz is behind this global assassination bureau. He has become a leader in a third political party and has a bright future in politics. But he's a murderer and murderer's don't make good politicians. . . or do they?